Native American Tribes: Apache

Geronimo, whose Apache name was Goyaaale, was a famous leader of the Chiricahua Apaches.

The Apache tribe is a group of Native Americans who lived on the Great Plains and in the southwestern United States and northern Mexico. They are related to tribes in Canada and Alaska, as well as the Navajos of the Southwest.

The Apaches traveled from place to place in groups, hunting buffalo and other animals. They were among the first Native Americans to ride horses. The Apaches lived in tents, called tipis, or round houses made from branches, called wickiups. The tribe was known for being good traders and fierce warriors.

Today, there are about 56,000 Apaches. Many live on reservations in New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma.

Native American Tribes: Cherokee

One of the largest tribes of Native Americans is the Cherokee. The Cherokee moved in to the southeastern U.S., possibly as late as the 1500s, from the North. By the 1700s, the Cherokee had become trading partners with the British colonists.

During the late 1700s and early 1800s, the Cherokees began adopting the Anglo-American culture. About 1809, Sequoyah, a Cherokee silversmith, began developing a written language for the tribe. This was a major advancement, as it was the first written language for a Native American tribe in the U.S. or Canada.

The Cherokee owned large amount of land in Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina. Settlers moving west wanted these lands. In 1838, President Martin Van Buren ordered troops to force over 16,000 Cherokee to leave. They were sent to Indian Territory, in what is now Oklahoma. This removal is called the Trail of Tears, since many Cherokee died during the journey.

In the Cherokee Nation in Indian Territory, the tribe established schools, hospitals and a newspaper. Today, Cherokee members live mostly in Oklahoma, North Carolina and the West Coast.

Native American Tribes: Cheyenne

The Cheyenne tribe of Native Americans were originally farmers from the Great Lakes area of the U.S. They moved slowly west, eventually reaching the Great Plains in the 1600s.

Once they arrived on the Great Plains, they began using horses. They stopped farming and began hunting buffalo for food. They traveled across the Plains, from Colorado to North Dakota, following the buffalo herds.

The Cheyenne resisted the arrival of settlers into their territory. This led to increased problems between the Cheyenne and the government of the U.S. There were many battles fought between the U.S. Army and the Cheyenne. One of the most famous was the Battle of Little Bighorn in 1876. In this battle, the Cheyenne joined with other tribes, such as the Lakota, to defeat the U.S. Army. Eventually, the Cheyenne were forced to surrender. By 1900, the Cheyenne lived on reservations in Oklahoma and Montana.

Native American Tribes: Hopi

Ancient Hopi pueblo

The Hopi tribe is a Native American tribe in Arizona. The word Hopi means “peaceable” or “behaving one” in their language.

They originally lived in complex houses made of mud bricks called pueblos. These houses were stacked on top of each other to form large villages.

The first European contact with the Hopi was in 1540 when the Spanish explorer, Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, visited them. Arizona became part of the U.S. in 1848 and the tribe established relations with the government of the U.S.

The Hopi are farmers, unlike their neighbors, the Navajo, who raise sheep. Through history, the two tribes have had several conflicts.

The tribe also has a strong tradition of art. The Hopi artists make beautiful pottery and silver jewelry.

The Hopi value the natural world and encourage respect for all things. Their ceremonies include the Kachina, which represent parts of nature. Colorful Kachina dolls are given to children to teach them about Hopi traditions.

Today many Hopi live on a reservation in Arizona. There are about 7,000 Hopi tribal members.

Native Americans: The Iroquois League

The Iroquois League is a group of Native American tribes in the northeastern United States and Canada. The tribes joined together between 1450-1600 based on a common language and traditions. Once they united, the fighting between the tribes stopped and they became a powerful group.

In the begininng, five tribes joined the League: the Seneca, Oneida, Mohawk, Onondaga and Cayuga. In 1722 the Tuscarora joined the Iroquois League and the group was known as the Six Nations.

The tribes of the Iroquois League had similar traditions and lifestyles. They lived in longhouses, which were large houses covered in bark. Several families would live in a longhouse. The members of the tribe would hunt but would also farm beans, squash and corn.

During the American Revolution, the tribes of the Iroquois League divided their support. Some tribes, such as the Mohawk and Seneca, sided with the British. Other tribal members of the Oneida and Seneca supported the colonists.

Today, there are about 80,000 Iroquois members living mostly in New York, Wisconsin, Oklahoma and Canada. Of the Six Nations, the Mohawk is the largest, with over 29,000 members.

The Lakota are one of the tribes of the Great Sioux Nation. Originally from the Great Lakes area of the United States, they moved west to Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. Today there are between 55,000 to 70,000 Lakota, most of whom live in South Dakota.

The Lakota learned about horses from the Cheyenne around 1730. They became excellent horsemen and hunted buffalo from horseback. They followed the buffalo herds, living in hide tents called tipis.

The Lakota were protective of their land. There were many conflicts when the pioneers tried to settle on or cross Lakota land. The U.S. Government made several treaties with the Lakota, but those treaties were often broken by the settlers or the U.S. Government.

The Lakota defended their land against the U.S. Army in several major battles. By 1890, however, the Lakota were defeated. Some Lakota moved to Canada and other moved to reservations in South Dakota.

Native American Tribes: Hopi

Ancient Hopi pueblo

The Hopi tribe is a Native American tribe in Arizona. The word Hopi means “peaceable” or “behaving one” in their language.

They originally lived in complex houses made of mud bricks called pueblos. These houses were stacked on top of each other to form large villages.

The first European contact with the Hopi was in 1540 when the Spanish explorer, Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, visited them. Arizona became part of the U.S. in 1848 and the tribe established relations with the government of the U.S.

The Hopi are farmers, unlike their neighbors, the Navajo, who raise sheep. Through history, the two tribes have had several conflicts.

The tribe also has a strong tradition of art. The Hopi artists make beautiful pottery and silver jewelry.

The Hopi value the natural world and encourage respect for all things. Their ceremonies include the Kachina, which represent parts of nature. Colorful Kachina dolls are given to children to teach them about Hopi traditions.

Today many Hopi live on a reservation in Arizona. There are about 7,000 Hopi tribal members.

Native Americans: The Iroquois League

The Iroquois League is a group of Native American tribes in the northeastern United States and Canada. The tribes joined together between 1450-1600 based on a common language and traditions. Once they united, the fighting between the tribes stopped and they became a powerful group.

In the beginning, five tribes joined the League: the Seneca, Oneida, Mohawk, Onondaga and Cayuga. In 1722 the Tuscarora joined the Iroquois League and the group was known as the Six Nations.

The tribes of the Iroquois League had similar traditions and lifestyles. They lived in longhouses, which were large houses covered in bark. Several families would live in a longhouse. The members of the tribe would hunt but would also farm beans, squash and corn.

During the American Revolution, the tribes of the Iroquois League divided their support. Some tribes, such as the Mohawk and Seneca, sided with the British. Other tribal members of the Oneida and Seneca supported the colonists.

Today, there are about 80,000 Iroquois members living mostly in New York, Wisconsin, Oklahoma and Canada. Of the Six Nations, the Mohawk is the largest, with over 29,000 members.

Lakota leader and holy man*

The Lakota are one of the tribes of the Great Sioux Nation. Originally from the Great Lakes area of the United States, they moved west to Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. Today there are between 55,000 to 70,000 Lakota, most of whom live in South Dakota.

The Lakota learned about horses from the Cheyenne around 1730. They became excellent horsemen and hunted buffalo from horseback. They followed the buffalo herds, living in hide tents called tipis.

The Lakota were protective of their land. There were many conflicts when the pioneers tried to settle on or cross Lakota land. The U.S. Government made several treaties with the Lakota, but those treaties were often broken by the settlers or the U.S. Government.

The Lakota defended their land against the U.S. Army in several major battles. By 1890, however, the Lakota were defeated. Some Lakota moved to Canada and other moved to reservations in South Dakota.

Native American Tribes: Navajo

The Native American tribe called the Navajo live mostly in New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado. Today the Navajo is the largest tribe in the U.S., with over 300,000 members.

They are related to the Apache tribe and tribes from Alaska and Canada. The Navajo are believed to have moved to the the Southwest around 1400. Once there, they became farmers and sheep herders.

The Navajo lived in homes called hogans. Hogans were made of wood and covered with mud. The hogan had a door facing the rising sun in the east. Today, the Navajo still use hogans for ceremonies.

The Navajo are known for their skill in making woven rugs and blankets. They also are skilled in jewelry making, especially silver and turquoise jewelry.

Native American Tribes:

Shoshone

Chief Washakie, a leader of the Eastern Shoshone

The Shoshone tribe of Native Americans lived in the western states of Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, and Montana. They are divided into three main groups: the Eastern Shoshone, the Northern Shoshone and the Western Shoshone. Some Shoshone members moved south to New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma and became the Comanche tribe. Today there are about 12,000 Shoshone tribe members.

The Shoshone were primarily hunters who followed the buffalo herds. They lived in tents made of hide, called tipis, which could easily moved from place to place.

One of the most famous Shoshone was Sacagawea, a Northern Shoshone woman. She traveled with the Lewis and Clark Expedition in 1804 through 1806.
