

ANSWERSHalloween Hyperboles

Hyperboles are exaggerations which are obviously untrue, often used in speaking or writing to make the story more interesting.

For example, "Sean is so hungry, he says he could eat a horse. He really is a bottomless pit."

Directions: Complete each sentence with a hyperbole.

- I've eaten so much candy, I think I might explode
- That kid's zombie costume is so scary, it would even frighten a monster
- We went to a frightening haunted house. When I was there, it felt as though my heart was going to jump out of my chest
- Mateo's elaborate jack-o-lantern is the fanciest piece of artwork I have ever seen.
- My cousin went trick-or-treating for a million hours. He came home with a ton of candy.
- Why don't you join our pumpkin carving party? We have so many pumpkins, we could light up the entire city with our jack-o-lanterns !
- Samantha carved her pumpkin quickly. She was finished in the blink of an eye.
