Do you think zoos are important? Although some people think zoos aren't always important, I think zoos are important for many reasons.

First, zoos are important because they save and protect animals. The Philadelphia Zoo's purpose is to study and protect animals throughout the world. The zoo hires zookeepers to take care of the animals.

In addition, zoos make the animals feel at home and happy. The creators designed some of the displays to look and feel like the original animal habitats.

Specifically, zoos allow us to see all kinds of exotic animals. This is important because we would not otherwise have the opportunity to see these types of animals. Zoos teach us about the animals.

In conclusion, I believe that zoos are an important institution in our communities. Zoos save and protect animals while making them feel at home. We are able to learn and see animals that do not normally live so close to us. Zoos should continue to be built and preserved so that future generations have the same experiences we have had.
