

Text Message Madness

When people use phones to send text messages, they are often in a hurry, or they're distracted, or they don't have a full keyboard, or they just don't care about spelling, grammar, or punctuation. Whatever the reason, text messages are usually sent with as few letters as possible, and they're riddled with language errors.

Rewrite these messages using proper English.

Example:

Im on the bus. Where r u
I'm on the bus. Where are you?

I dont want to see the movie tonite.

I don't want to see the movie tonight.

Call me when your close to main st

Call me when you're close to Main Street.

U get my message? Ill call u again tmrw.

Did you get my message? I'll call you again tomorrow.

Hey what time we having dinner 2nite

Hey, what time are we having dinner tonight?

Goin back to work. C u l8r

I'm going back to work. See you later

R u gonna be there by 8?

Are you going to be there by 8?

Im late cause I went to the store.

I'm late because I went to the store.

I bought the concert tix were gonna be in the front row!

I bought the concert tickets. We're going to be in the front row!