

Endangered Species

Amur Leopard

Panthera pardus orientalis

Russia Far East
&
Northern China

There are only about 20-30 Amur leopards left in the wild, in a tiny area that connects China and Russia. At this time they are listed as critically endangered. The species is threatened by excessive poaching, and their habitat is in danger due to high levels of construction. Their numbers are increasing in captivity.