

Endangered species are plants or animals that are in danger of becoming extinct.

The Ozark Big-Eared Bat can be found in the Ozark Mountains of Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma. This bat's ears are more than a quarter the length of its body. During hibernation, some big-eared bats curl their ears up like a ram's horns.