

Parasaurolophus

The Parasaurolophus (par-ah-SAWR-OL-uh-fus) was a herbivore and could walk on either two legs or all four. The main feature on this dinosaur was a crest on its head that formed a long, curved pipe pointing backwards from the skull. There is much debate about this crest but many believe it helped regulate body temperature.