

Dryads

Dryads are female tree-spirits that inhabit the forests of ancient Greece. They protect the forests and the trees from harm. Each dryad's soul is connected to a tree, and if that tree dies then the dryad dies with it. In ancient times it was forbidden to slay a dryad and her tree, and the gods would punish any man who did.

Think about the geography of Greece. What geographical features are there besides trees and forests? Choose one and create a mythological creature based on the geographical feature you chose.
