

Florence Nightingale

Florence Nightingale was a nurse who tended to wounded soldiers during the Crimean War in England in the 1850s. She worked to change the unsanitary conditions of hospitals at the time, and helped nursing become a respected profession.