Magnify an MVP

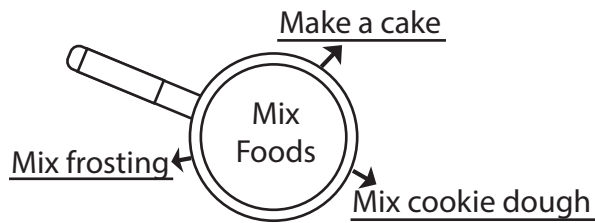

When writing an informational piece, we must look closely at our topic to provide our readers with facts, definitions, and details. Moreover, we must fully explain the facts, definitions, and details we provide. We should also group our information so that it makes sense to the reader.

Many of us have heard of one type of MVP, or Most Valuable Player, in a sport like baseball. Have you ever thought about another MVP— your Most Valuable Possession — for specific activities and places?

Choose your Most Valuable Possession for a favorite activity. Write your MVP beside the topic line. Use each magnifying glass to write a description of the object or one of its uses. Write additional details on the lines outside of each magnifying glass. Use your ideas from each magnifying glass to construct a separate paragraph that will be part of your informational essay.

Example:

Topic: Mixer

Topic: _____
