

On the Mark!

Add the correct punctuation mark to the end of each sentence.

My new dog has one black ear .

What time is your piano lesson

Where did you put your boots

That is so exciting

Julia and Jeffrey both live in North Carolina

Hurry, the bathtub is overflowing onto the floor

Oh no, our dinner is burning

How long will you be gone

That is so wonderful

Statements, questions, and exclamations

Brain Box

Declarative sentences are statements that tell about something. They end with a period. For example: I went fishing.

Interrogative sentences are questions that ask about something. They end with a question mark. For example: Do you have a bike?

Exclamatory sentences are exclamations that express strong feelings. They end with an exclamation point. For example: I hooked a big one!

Now write three sentences of your own—one declarative, one interrogative, and one exclamatory. Remember to use correct punctuation.
