

Other Ways to Say It: Common Verbs #1

When you use strong verbs, your writing becomes more descriptive and impactful. Strong verbs are specific and vivid, and they can evoke emotion from your reader. Look at the bolded verb in this example.

❌ Emira walked through the door five minutes after choir practice began.

The verb leaves the reader to interpret what the scene actually looks like. To create a more expressive, specific sentence for your reader, consider replacing the verb with something else. Look at these alternatives.

- ✓ Emira strolled through the door five minutes after choir practice began.
- ✓ Emira marched through the door five minutes after choir practice began.
- ✓ Emira hurried through the door five minutes after choir practice began.
- ✓ Emira stomped through the door five minutes after choir practice began.
- ✓ Emira flew through the door five minutes after choir practice began.

These verbs better express Emira's actions as she arrived late to choir practice.

Directions: Look at the verbs below. Then, write down at least five more descriptive ways to say them. Use reference materials, such as a dictionary or a thesaurus, to help you.
