

Security Briefing

Good morning! Sandra has provided you a list of the most pressing security issues for the day. Read each one and circle the action you'd like to take.

Hackers have taken down a major bank's website, and millions of citizens' money may be at risk.

Get the CIA on it ASAP!

As president, I shouldn't be messing with people's bank accounts. It's unfortunate, but I can't do anything about it.

Jewelry store heists are taking place all over Atlanta.

Contact local police to see if they need help.

Move over, Atlanta police! The Commander-in-Chief will take it from here!

We've broken into a ring of people trying to steal the American flag from the Smithsonian. They're eyeing the ruby slippers, too.

Don't worry about it—someone's bound to notice people carrying a 34-foot flag around town. If they pull off the heist, I'm sure the police will take care of it.

It's important to protect our national treasures! Tell Smithsonian security to keep an eye out for shifty-looking characters hanging too close to the flag.
