

Languages

This is a list of words from other languages that do not translate to English. Create a new English word for each one. Then try using it in a sentence!

Hygge

(noun) It is a Danish word that means complete absence of anything annoying, irritating or emotionally overwhelming, and the presence of and pleasure from comforting, gentle and soothing things.

Uitwaaien

(verb) This is a Dutch word that means taking a walk in the country to clear your head. It translates directly to mean: “walk in the wind”.

Qualunquismo

(noun) This is an Italian word that refers to someone who isn't interested in politics or issues in society. It came from a political party that discouraged people from trusting the government.

Ilunga

(noun) This is a Bantu word that refers to a person who doesn't mind being treated badly once, will tolerate it if it happens again, but will do something about it if it happens a third time.

Tingo

(verb) This is a word from the Easter Islands that means borrowing things from a friend's house until there is nothing left. It is taking advantage of a friend and never stopping.

Sympathique

(adjective) This is a French word that directly translates to mean "sympathetic". It means much more than sympathetic though. It refers to someone who is gentle, friendly and considerate of others. The Spanish word sympatico means the same.

---

Why do you think certain words develop in languages that can't be easily translated into others?